- Sustainable - not related to designer 'taste' which is subjective and could lead to a pastiche looking development. In the same way that current housing reflects the era it was built, new build should represent the architecture of the current period
- Size, location
- Stop all red tape which costs money both sides, been there and won, with a lot of experience on both sides, they have to look after their jobs
- Compatible styles
- So new properties are in keeping with the village/hamlet
- To ensure development is appropriate for the site and to ensure 'new' designs regard this
- It should be stipulated in a village design statement as a guide! Each case has its own merits!!
- Visual aspect
- Consideration should be given to ensuring that new builds are environmentally sustainable, using locally sourced materials where possible
- We have a lot of stone, use it
- Mass, scale, visual amenity, visual intrusion, building materials sympathetic to existing buildings
- Carbon footprint reduced, heat saving
